WHY EARNING THE DOCTOR OF PHYSICAL THERAPY DEGREE FROM USCIENCES BEST ENHANCES MY FUTURE CAREER GOALS 2

Choosing a suitable school for my Doctor of Physical Therapy degree (DPT) will help me unlock the full potential of my career as a physical therapist. As a graduate with a bachelor degree in Kinesiology, I had many opportunities to interact with professionals, patients, and other people within the physical therapy field. While looking into DPT schools, I prefer the USciences in Philadelphia to others because of its organization. As physical therapists, I must interact with people from different places. I chose this school because it observes diversity, which will improve my knowledge by interacting with a diverse population. For the first professional year of the DPT program, the university offers health promotion and wellness across the lifespan, which is a class other DPT schools do not offer. It is a critical course that will increase my knowledge of interacting with the dynamic environment during my career.

The University of the Sciences in Philadelphia also has a Motion Analysis Laboratory, which will be a good resource to help me understand the scientific aspects of my career. The facility is essential as it has a musculoskeletal department which will help assess my ability to provide manual therapy, which is my specialty. It will be an addition to the clinical experience the school integrates within the physical therapy course. Such programs reasons make the University of Philadelphia the best school to pursue my Doctor of Physical Therapy.

Moreover, the university has other vital facilities like the athletic recreation center, J.W. England Library, the dining hall, etc. Other than the athletic recreation center, there are other recreation centers near USciences that I secure a job to support my tuition fee. For instance, I always want to work as a gym instructor; hence, leaning in the University would be a good chance. The resources I can access while at USciences are essential to my future career goals as they ensure my overall well-being on the campus. Therefore, with all those programs and resources, I believe the University of Philadelphia is the best school to pursue my Doctor of Physical Therapy Degree.

Finally, learning at the USciences offers me an opportunity to improve my professionalism as I will interact more with my colleagues and neighboring society. For instance, the campus’s traditions like annual 5K race, advances in pharmacy practice symposium, commencement, conferment, family fall fest, etc. will improve my service delivery. Also, the university has clubs and organizations, which makes life fun; thus, it will motivate my performance through sharing experiences with colleagues. Additionally, USciences has academic advisers and also career services, which are beneficial as they will offer me opportunities like summer jobs, internship, among others.
